present recommendations for discussion and voting.

This process will go on until June 3, when the recommendations that receive most support (maximum 10) will be transferred to a public site for voting by the general public.

These recommendations, ranked by the support received inside the platform and by the votes received in the public site will be organized by the Facilitators and presented to the Panelists in the Sustainable Development Dialogues (Rio de Janeiro, 16-19 June 2012), during Rio+20.

From this set of recommendations three will be chosen per theme can take this during the Sustainable Development Dialogues and conveyed directly to the Heads of State gathering in the High-Level Segment of Rio+20.

* This initiative has no connection to the intergovernmental negotiation process in the Conference.

Dear Rio+20 Conference Registrant,

As you have registered for the Rio+20 Conference in Brazil, we are pleased to invite you to join an online conversation on 10 themes at the heart of sustainable development at www.riodialogues.org. You can also submit your own recommendations for sustainable solutions. But be quick, the strongest recommendations will be conveyed to the heads of States and Governments at the High Level Roundtables during Rio+20. Participation in the online Dialogues is open to everyone, so please encourage members of your organisation and networks to join the Rio+20 online Dialogues by sharing the link www.riodialogues.org or by sending a list of email addresses to support@riodialogues.org and we will invite them to the online Dialogues.

The Sustainable Development Dialogues Online Platform is a digital space for sharing knowledge and experiences on issues related to sustainable development. The main purpose of the online discussions is to foster an open and meaningful exchange of ideas, information and expertise with a view to creating recommendations that will inform the Sustainable Development Dialogues scheduled to take place in Rio de Janeiro, from 16 to 19 of June, during the Rio+20 Conference.

According to ILO estimates in 2008 more than 2.34 million people died from work related diseases and accidents. A healthy workforce is a pre-requisite for sustainable development and all new green jobs need to be healthy jobs.

Protecting the health of the workforce while promoting working capacity, providing universally available health services and social protection can contribute to sustainable development and productivity.

We therefore propose integrating health assessments into to strategies on for job creation in the green economy. In particular identifying health risks among both formal and informal workers across the supply chain and acting to mitigate these risks.

As with all recommendations indicators are needed to measure progress potential indicators could include the following, and should be where appropriate disaggregated by gender, occupation, employment type and socioeconomic status:

- Measuring the occupational injury rate both fatal and non fatal as well the total burden of occupational disease.
- The proportion of workplaces in public and private sectors (formal and informal) that comply with basic national occupational safety and health standards
- Ratification of core international labour instruments for occupational safety and health (ILO Conventions 155, 161 and 187).
- Ratification and implementation of WHO Framework Convention on tobacco control and implementation of articles 8 and 14 relating to smoke free work environments.
- Proportion of the workforce exposed to occupation risk factors: air pollution, noise, carcinogens, hazardous chemicals, ergonomic and psycho-social stressors and others.
